

Romance and Classical Studies/Vision Statement's directions with examples

Vision Statement

2. Form engaged citizens who participate critically in local and global communities and who navigate the world's ever-changing dynamics by furthering students' cultural understanding through broad and rigorous curricular initiatives.

- Pursue a more engaged approach to applied learning of the diverse Romance world.
- Create further study abroad opportunities for students and developing service learning opportunities on current and future study abroad programs.
- Teach Romance languages in their social, historical, political context, and their foundation in Classical languages, and their spread and cultural cross-pollination throughout the Mediterranean.
- Promote inclusiveness across the diverse Romance world.
- Developing service-learning study abroad programs.
- Contribute to the profound transformation of students by helping them not only to shape and define their social and (inter)national identities but also to understand the physiological changes involved in learning to speak a foreign language.
- Contribute to the professionalization of undergraduate and graduate students through the study of Romance and Classical languages and cultures.
- Contribute to the creation of world community of speakers, professional readers and writers.
- Request a T-S position for a specialist in service-learning and Romance Languages across the globe.